What is Bloom?

Bloom is a meeting (we call it a consultation) that helps the important adults around you find ways to help you look after your emotional, social, mental health and wellbeing.

The adults who attend Bloom meetings all have different backgrounds, but they share an interest in supporting children and young people to get the support they need to thrive and be well.

You and your family will choose the adult you want to speak for you at the meeting - this person is called a nominated professional. The nominated professional is usually a person you know well; someone you may have been working with, like a youth worker or a pastoral support lead at school, or even a teacher.

How can Bloom help me?

We all find life difficult sometimes. Bloom might be able to help you with things like:

Managing difficult feelings and emotions

Struggling at school or with friends or family

Feeling worried about things

Behaviours that you find hard to manage or that might be unsafe...

(like running away, hitting out)

If you're struggling like this, you may have spoken to an adult you trust; maybe a parent, carer or GP - or even someone at school or a club you attend.

If it's a member of your family, together you should talk to a teacher, or another professional who can speak to you about Bloom. If you all agree it's the right next step for you, they will support you to complete a referral form. They will then send it in to us and ask for our help on your behalf (we call this making a referral).

If you have been referred to us, and we think Bloom is the best way to help you, we will get in touch with the person who sent the referral in to talk about what happens next.

What do I need to do?

The most important thing you can do is help the adults at your Bloom meeting understand what it is that you are struggling with or finding difficult, and if there's anything that you think might help.

To do that we suggest meeting up with your nominated professional, and any other adult that might go to the meeting on your behalf, to talk through your worries and what you feel might help you. They will then go to the Bloom meeting and explain how you're feeling to the other adults there, so that they can work together to figure out the best way to help and support you.

Your nominated professional might also speak to your parent(s) and carer(s) to ask for their thoughts too - that way we know what's difficult for everyone.

What happens at and after the consultation meeting?

At the meeting the Bloom panel will talk through the things you and your family are finding difficult.

They will talk about the different approaches and services that could support you, building on what is already working and that you find helpful.

By the end of the meeting, we will all have agreed on a plan to help you. It will be sent to you (your family) and the adults you have said we can share it with.

In the plan we will have made suggestions and recommendations about other services that might be helpful for you, and strategies the adults who are already working with you can use to improve your situation.

The person you can speak to about the plan is called the point of contact - this is usually your nominated professional. They can talk you through what happened at your Bloom meeting and answer any questions you might have about the plan.

If things don't improve for you or become more difficult in future, the good news is that you can be referred back to Bloom.
